CURRENT COMMENTS

IT'S ONE THING OR ANOTHER

Just as the farmer sees the prospect of a bumper crop this year, along comes the news that binder twine is expected to rise in price. According to officials of the Grain Growers' association who have been conducting an investigation in the annual question of binder twine supplies the manufacturers have formed a corner in raw material, and the monopoly is now so complete that a general order to raise the price may be expected at any moment. The farmer seems destined to be up "again" it all the time between sowing and selling time. It's just one turned thing and another. But perhaps the most important question to him in the near future will be, how much is he to get for the grain is as important as that of how much grain he will have to sell. From present appearances the price prospect is decidedly not as good as the crop prospect, as the tendency of the former would indicate low prices, particularly in oats, the price for the latter at present fluctuating between 20c and 23c., and with a new and bumper crop in sight, it does not look very promising for big prices prevailing this fall. It is to be hoped, however, that better prices will be forthcoming this fall when the selling time comes. Just in proportion as the farmer gets paid for his grain and produce, in the same proportion does the country prosper, particularly this is so in Alberta, where the "farmer is king."

DOES SHEEP RAISING PAY?

This question has often been asked by many farmers in this section of Alberta. From time to time articles have been written and published by sheep experts on this important subject. On account of the grain failures during the past three years or so, a number of farmers have been turning their attention to other sources of money-producing projects on the farm, feeling that mixed farming had come to stay, and consequently sheep raising has received a great deal of attention from the farmer, but with some uncertainty as to whether it would be feasible and at the same time profitable. Two at least of Staveland's enterprising farmers made the venture. Mr. Jas. Rae purchased a flock of about 1,000 and Mr. Jas. Lysall some 75 head last fall. From Mr. Lysall we learn that at present he has a flock of 66—the remainder he has either sold or used as food for himself and family, none being taken by coyotes. He has just finished shearing his flock. A Calgary firm offered him 13 cents a lb. for the wool f.o.b. Staveland. A better offer of 14 cents a lb. was made by a Claresholm buyer, at which price Mr. Lysall sold. The 66 sheep made an average of 10 lbs. of wool each, or an upshot price of $1.40 per head, and a grand total of $92.40 for the wool alone, saying nothing about the lambs, and also the carcasses of the wethers, some of which he had sold at 8 cents per lb. Mr. Lysall fenced in 22 acres of land, sowing it with bromus grass, and the 66 sheep are not anywhere able to keep down the grass on the 22 acres. Mr. Lysall is of the opinion that he could keep from 1,200 to 1,500 head of sheep on 160 acres of land sown with bromus grass. The winter keep of the sheep he found was very much cheaper than any other class of stock. He considers that his sheep raising is a far better investment than growing grain, with its attendant expensive machinery upkeep and the collector stepping in and taking your profits without as much as a thank you in the fall—and, as Jimmy says, the best of it is, that there is little or no work attached to the sheep raising industry, which alone ought to be some inducement to the sheep raising proposition, as the farmer could have more time to devote to other work on the farm, or to the working out of more money-producing schemes, which would help materially to swell his yearly dividends.

For some few years large flocks of sheep, numbering several thousands, have been brought into the Cayley district from Montana for winter pasture, and it has again and again been fully demonstrated that it has been a very profitable investment to the owners, as they claim that no better pasture can be found in Alberta for their purpose, and it is a wonder that more of our farmers have not gone into this line of mixed farming.

There is no doubt, however, that our farmers are getting talkative to this important question, and it may be safely predicted that the very near future will find very few of our farmers without a large flock of sheep, and that sheep raising in this part of Alberta will become a very thriving industry on a very large scale. There's money in sheep every time, particularly when we consider the high retail price of mutton in Alberta.

Pasturing Hogs

Of the many forage plants, alfalfa is one of the most satisfactory for hogs, since it can be made a permanent pasture and is rich in protein, making an excellent combination with corn or other grain. The leaves are tender and the stem small, which makes it easily masticated and it is very much relished. At Indian Head, on the farm of Mr. W. D. Lang, one of the farmers who is doing illustration work for the Commission of Conservation in Saskatchewan, some interesting results have been obtained. On less than one acre of alfalfa 55 hogs were pastured during the summer of 1912 for varying periods, 25 hogs, several sows and one boar being pastured for four months, while the others were on for a shorter time. While on the pasture the only grain fed was one-half ton of shorts mixed thinly with water. About 500 bushels of barley and a little oats were fed in finishing and hitting the hogs for market in the fall and early winter. A little over $650 worth of pork was produced at a total cost of not over $300. Mr. Lang considered that by feeding it to hogs he received at least $1 per bushel for his barley. Besides the economical production of the pork, the maintenance of soil fertility by feeding the grain on the farm is a distinct advantage. Compare this foregoing excellent "sanitary" and natural method of raising "the pork we eat" with that recently mentioned in the public press as recommended by a M.O.H. of a Canadian city, viz., the establishment of a municipal piggery, where hogs will be fed on refuse, often in a state of decomposition, and where the hogs thus fattened will be slaughtered for human food.

It is just such methods as those suggested by the sanitary officer which lead the public to believe that the hog is an unclean animal. Certainly if our modern methods of the disposal of house refuse are to be continued along the lines suggested by this sanitary officer, then our appreciation of the hog and of the pork must be affected by a feeling of disgust. If the farmer is wise, and the importance of encouraging the raising of hogs along the lines of the up-to-date Western farmer is realized by the public, then the day is not far distant when the farm fed hog will be the only one that can be killed and sold as Canadian pork. From the sanitary standpoint of pure healthy food, the feeding of hogs in municipal piggeries should be discouraged, and municipal health authorities should be required to devise some more sanitary method for the disposal of town refuse.

From Ottawa comes the statement that one of the contractors on the National Transcontinental whose home is in that city, cleared two million dollars on work which he actually did and three-quarters of a million on that which he sublet. Apparently he may look for some interesting reading when the commission which is investigating the appalling cost of this road has its report to make.

Laurier's Rainbow, the Pacific fleet unit of the Liberal idea of a Canadian navy, has been depopulated of forty souls. The old craft is now free to join the Niobe on the cruise to the river St., where they may render excellent service as houseboats for super-heated "shades."

The heart of Canada is true to the core on the naval project. And the core is sound.

An Incident That Hastened the Reconciliation.

By CECILY ALLEN.

Aunt Helen mollified Bertie, who Strongly disapproved Aunt Helen, and Bertie, as far as his youth would permit, disapproved both Aunt Helen and Bertie Strong. That was why he felt vaguely aggrieved that he saw so little of Mr. Henry these days, and had known that in his small person he was persecuted duty and stood between the two objects of his adoration he would have felt doubly aggrieved.

When he did know that Mr. Henry had taken to walking on the other side of the street and wearing pressing invitations to "come and see all our plums" and that Aunt Helen avoided all conversation bearing on Mr. Henry, who also had developed a tendency to red eyes and absent-minded conduct, which annoyed Bertie, particularly when he was in the company of a fairy story and started out of the window without speaking.

The neighbors might have enlightened Bertie as to the true state of affairs. They all said it was too foolish for Henry, who had been married for years, to be so much taken up with carrying out his idea of duty too far, and one or two said that he was as well as the dead.

It was the most serious of early spring weather when Bertie felt the depression which seemed to have settled upon the pretty little girl, and Aunt Helen had occupied alone the servants and the kitchen, and there she sat, slumped down in the sitting room, where Aunt Helen was writing at her desk, and there she sat, slumped down in the sitting room, where Aunt Helen was writing at her desk, and there she sat, slumped down in the sitting room, where Aunt Helen was writing at her desk.

Just as she was about to go to bed, she felt a tap on her shoulder, and she turned to find Bertie standing there, looking at her with a sad expression. "Aunt Helen," he said, "I'm coming!" and he slipped quickly out of the room, leaving her to wonder what he was up to.

He did not answer, and there was a silence that was not because of his being asleep and crossed to her desk. "See, dear, it was not because of my being asleep that I have been writing to you when he was away, and now I'm writing to you when he's home."

"And now he knows it all right again. Let's go upstairs and make up our minds to be good. Poor chap! He had a great scare."

"And so Bertie, waking from restlessness on the bed in indignation, and reaching out for two protesting hands, he fell into peaceful sleep."

"Witchery of the Bermudas." Bertie was stretched as against the quackertick to protect us from the midday sun. Under these we lounged away the day in indolent idleness, with half shut eyes, upon the quiet ocean. The night was scarcely less beautiful than the day, the rising moon sent a quivering column of silver along the undulating surface of the sea, and the stars shone down upon the water, and the air was so still that the sound of the waves was almost lost.

"Good for you," said Mr. Henry, still drawing away from the clinking glass. "You see, I'm not a drinker, but I must run along and dress. See you later!"

"Bertie clung to his hand. "Maggie made some sponge cakes with icing. I know—I liked the icing best." "You eat one, and I'll eat one." "Good for you," said Mr. Henry, still drawing away from the clinking glass. "You see, I'm not a drinker, but I must run along and dress. See you later!"

Persistent rumors are afloat in Macleod to the effect that construction work on the Calgary-Macleod branch of the C.N.R. will be started from the Macleod end at the beginning of August, and that two large construction camps would be established just north of the Old Man River to make preparations for the building of the high level bridge. These reports, as yet, have not been officially confirmed, but it is hoped by everyone in town that they are true.

A very enjoyable time was spent at the lawn social held at the home of Mrs. Chas. Howard last Thursday evening. A large number of mosquitoes were there for supper.

Henry Rudolph, the seven-year-old son of Charles Rudolph, living on Grant & Moir's farm near Barons, lies cold in death as the result of a regrettable mishap. A brother, aged 11, was taking a shell from a gun when it exploded, penetrating the little fellow's head, through an eye.

Miss Marie Walker came over from Vulcan Monday, for a visit with her sister, Miss Iva Walker, going on to Stately Tuesday afternoon. A party in her honor was given by her friends Monday evening. The guests assembled at the home of Mrs. Mayland, and later in the evening went to the opera house, where music and dancing were enjoyed. A dainty lunch was served at midnight. About thirty-five of Miss Walker's friends were present.—Nanton News.

Messrs. Sloane, Wickson, Beisiegel and Chaffee were in Calgary on Monday in connection with the "Equity Association" of Cayley. It is not necessary to mention the keen interest that the U. F. A. of Cayley are taking in this matter, and we think it is the duty of every member connected with both associations to put their shoulder to the wheel and roll this old chariot out of existence. This matter at present is under lawful test, which will mature some time in September.

The letter which the secretary of the North Dakota fair association sent to Western Canadians who wished to enter their products at the state exhibition, should make the best kind of publicity material. In notifying them that their entries would not be allowed he said that the refusal was due to the feeling that the local exhibitors would be discouraged by the Canadian competition.

A motion for the second reading of the home rule for Ireland bill was defeated in the House of Lords Tuesday evening, the vote being 302 to 164. The motion of Lord Lansdowne, the leader of the opposition in the upper house, which declared "that this house declines to proceed with the consideration of the bill until it has been submitted to the judgment of the country, was adopted without a division.

Harvest Labor

According to a Regina dispatch officials of the Saskatchewan government are looking forward to a serious shortage of harvest labor. Such visions have been characteristic of the west for many years, but in some way we have always managed to get plenty of men for the work.

The problem of harvest labor this year is going to be a manifold one. There will be one problem in getting enough men in to do the harvest work, and then there will be a still bigger problem in getting them out of the country again when their work is done. Other years have taught us that more than ten percent of the men who come from the south, east and the west to help gather the grain remain permanently with us. They drift into the nearest cities, spend their earnings, are driven to work by necessity and then stay by choice. Other years there has been sufficient surplus labor to absorb this ten percent. This year there are indications that it will be difficult for men to secure work of any kind in the cities. The financial unrest which has mantled the globe has not skipped western Canada. Harvesters who come and squander their money will very likely become charges on the communities. To avoid this the harvesters from afar should be familiarized with conditions before they finish their work in the grain fields. This will be a poor winter for the man without work, and work in the cities will be very hard to obtain.

The Skooter Mania

(With acknowledgments to a popular rag-time)

Torments, torments in the air
Stinging, stinging every where.
Indignant and rich
Doesn't matter which Skeeters sample the lot—what!
Nuts and maidens, oh, so sweet!
Flirting on a garden seat.
For the shadows fall
See them one and all
Scratch, scratch, scratching the spot.

Everybody's doing it, doing it and ruing it!
Everybody's doing it, doing it and ruing it!
Like wild creatures tortured and untamed,
Young and passe, slim and amply framed,
Scratch their epidermises inflamed
Who's ashamed? Who's ashamed?
For
Everybody's doing it, doing it and ruing it!
Everybody's doing it, doing it and ruing it!
If you think you've got a bonny batch
I can show as good a set to match
Come, come, come, come, come up to the scratch,
Everybody's doing it now!

There were many of us who never could understand the warnings that used to be given against taking cold drinks and cold baths in hot weather, any more than we could the practice of giving hot drinks to those suffering from fever. It seemed contrary to common sense. The New York health authorities now recognize that this is the case and in some hot weather advice which they issued the other day recommended cold water in abundance both inside and outside the body. Those overcome with the heat are plunged directly into cold baths. "Keep cool physically," we are told, "by light clothing; cool air as far as possible, cool water and cold food, if it is agreeable. Above all, keep cool mentally."

The deferred election in Athabasca constituency will be held on Wednesday, July 30th, with nomination day just one week earlier, Wednesday, July 23rd. These dates have been decided upon by the returning officer, in whose hands the decision as to when the election should be held had been left. Only two candidates are in the field today, the Conservatives having selected Mayor Jas. Wood as their representative, while Hon. A. G. MacKay has been selected as the Liberal standard bearer.
